Math, Science and Technology

Mission Statement John N.C. Stockton's mission is promote academic excellence within a safe, nurturing learning community, where all stakeholders collaborate to meet the needs of every student.

Math, Science and Technology

Stockton's Math, Science and Technology Magnet Program offers students hands-on learning and technology based activities. Children discover a love of learning through creative teaching and the use of the workshop model.

In addition, a media center and multi-media classrooms offer the latest in technology for all children. All these features complement our strong academic focus, using cooperative learning and materials to enrich lessons in science, math and technology.

Stockton Elementary:

- Is a standards-based school that offers strong academic programs enhanced by technology in the classroom (desktop computers, document cameras, listening stations)
- Has a 31 station computer lab with each class having weekly 45 minute time slots and receiving instruction from a technology specialist
- Offers gifted classes, grades 1-5, and uses the inclusion model to meet the needs of exceptional education students
- Is proud of its highly qualified (NCLB) and professional faculty and staff; one that is kept up to date on the latest research practices with on-site professional development
- Offers a well-rounded educational experience, including music, visual arts, media, physical education and guidance
- Has active and supportive parent groups, including PTA and FOS (Friends of Stockton)
- Uses business partners to support educational programs
- Offers a quality before and after school extended day program
